

Study Day with Prof. Dr. John Behr (University of Aberdeen)
Divine Flesh: Human Being in Early Christianity and Today

Faculty of Theology,
Institute of Old
Catholic Theology &
Institute for New Testament Studies

Online Doctoral Colloquium
13 September 2021, 14:00-17:45 (CET)

14:00-14:10	Introductions
14:10-14:45	Part I: Homo liber <ul style="list-style-type: none">Ryan D. Donell (University of Geneva) 'Analogy' in the Theology of Colin E. Gunton
14:45-15:00	Break
15:00-16:10	Part II: Birth and Death <ul style="list-style-type: none">Dario Colombo (University of Fribourg) The Divine Flesh of MaryIlya Kaplan (University of Bern) The Economy of the Mortal Body in Gregory of Nyssa's De mortuis
16:10-16:30	Break
16:30-17:40	Part III: Anthropology and Eschatology <ul style="list-style-type: none">Stefano de Feo (University of Bern) "Παιδιά, ἐσχάτη ὥρα ἐστίν" (1 Jn 2:18): Reflections on the Values and Meanings of the Lexeme εσχάτ* in the New TestamentZachary Seals (University of Geneva) Beholding the Perfect Image: The Beatific Vision in its Anthropological Context
17:40-17:45	Concluding remarks

This project is supported by the Fund for the Promotion of Young Researchers (University of Bern)